

Richard Scott is Director of the National Wildflower Centre at the Eden Project, and delivers creative conservation project work nationally. Richard is specialist in creative conservation/ ecological project work, focused around wildflower species; particularly linking people and communities in this process. Richard worked for the environmental charity Landlife for 26 years developing creative conservation philosophy, and delivery in both urban and rural landscapes, giving advice across the UK and worldwide. Richard is currently the Chair of the UK Urban Ecology Forum.