

Niall Williams started his career working in practical conservation and forestry before moving into landscape architecture and urban design. He currently is a director of ND Landscape Architects Ltd, a Trustee of the Landscape Institute and their Delegate to the World and European Councils of the International Federation of Landscape Architects. Niall was also a professional advisor, now director of the Tree Charter, a cross sector project bringing together over 80 organisations and engaging an estimated 70million people, now being used to advise councillors and cities on urban tree planting and policy. Niall's interests lay in Urban Forestry, Agro-forestry, landscape-led development and connecting people to nature.